We have never read a romance which possessed the power of enchaining the attention in a more remarkable manner, or which by its vivid details rendered it so utterly impossible to lay it down till perused from title-page to finis, as in the case of this most powerfully written story. The title is the key to the book, as the whole story hinges on the strife between the wayward, headstrong impulses of the head, against the affectionate, high, noble, and self scrificing ones The hero-s young, amiable, but rather west-minded man-is thrown into the vortex of high life, where, in addition to the usual dangers that beset our youth in that position, he is urged on to destruction by a pretended friend as it will be elegantly illus rated, and is just the book to take into our families.

E W and VALUABLE BOOK for FAMILIES and SCHOOLS. Dr. Bewer's GUIDE TO SCIENCE; or, The Scientific Knowledge of Things, Familiar. 490 pages. Price 524 cents.
The object of "Dr. Brewer's Guide to Science" is to explain scientifically and in the most centies and intelligible manner, about 2.600 questions of the common phenomena of life similar to those subjoined;
Why does lightning turn beer and milk sour?
Why do leaves turn brown in autumn?
Why are coals b ack—snow white—leaves green—violets blue—and rose red?

Why are counts hard—snow white—leaves green—violets blue—and rotes red!

It contains an amount of useful information never before collect din a shape so convenient for study, and so easy for reference. The questions are such as are familiar to every person, and should be understood by every child. Who has not been asked by a child some such questions as these which follow the second and dire not?

Why does a candle show light?

Why does water boil and freeze?

Why does the air dry damp linen?

And how often is a child called "troublewome and foolish for asking such silvy questions?" The object of Dr. Breweis Guide to Science is to supply answers to above 2,000 such questions, in language so simple that every child may understand it, yet not so childish as to effend the scientific.

Whether was adopt to reject the views of Mr. Carry, it must be acknowledged that we find in his works a great number of ideas that are new and original, and worthy of serious examination.

Bastiat has taken from Carry ideas that the American economist has developed, and has presented to ins readers with se much skill, and with such an imposing mass of facts, as, is truth, to leave in suspense the decision of even the most accomplished student of his works.

Carry, and after him Bastiat, have thus introduced a formula in relation to the measure of value that I believed destined. His work cannot be omitted from our "Biblioteca deal" Economista," nor can its publication be delayed.

THE PAST, THE PRESENT, AND THE FUTURE.

In one vol., 8vo.

Full of important facts, hearing on topica that are now agitating all Europe.

Decidedly a book to be read by all who take an interest in the progress of accids demance.

(Speciator.

The field survived by Mr. Carey in "The Past and Present" is a broad one—broader than that of any other book of our time—for it discusses every interest of man. The ideas are original—whether true or not, they are both new and bold. They are based upon a great law of Nature, and it is the first time that any system of political economy has been origined to the which that any system of his broad of the progress of the late facts are increased. The consequences that all the facts have themselves, a completely as did the planets when Copernicus had satisfied himself that the early is volved around the sun.

The system here developed, of which we have indicated only one of the principal features, is supported and illustrated by numerous examples. It is, as our readers see, the theory of progress, redeemed from the whitness of plaineophical specializing economically established, and brought becomes to subject the secures of society from its fartness and boulage, and brought the system of the world's business, the financial and industrial interest, and the civil and social relations of men and nations, within the domnion of principles, and set their mysteries clear in the light of a simple and certain philosophy.

All this their contents of the philosophy of human Eaturn. Had the contents of a completed thought, the soundness of a vital ruth, and the leaving of a symmetrical theory, but there is about only the full man Eaturn and the leaving of a symmetrical theory, but there is about the freshmen of the world's business, the financial and intermines, intermines of sew and decadrial consections and harmonies, intermining the remotest departments of the publical facts on reaser wonder which starts up, that they could so long remain untaneous.

THE HARMONY OF INTERESTS: Agricultural,
Manufacturing, and Commercial.

Mr. Carey, the wall-known statistical writer of America, has supplied us with implie materials for conducting such an inquiry, and plied us with implie materials for conducting such an inquiry, and we safely reconnected us remarkable work to all who wish to investigate the cause of the progress or decline of industrial communities.

THE GUERILLA CHIEF; OR, THE
THE ROMANCE OF WAR
BY CAPTAIN GRANT.

This day published, illustrated.
This splendid work of fiction is calculated to obtain as wide a pepularity in this country as it already has done in England. It is a powerfully and truthfully written Pictures of Warl in all its phases, and has received the unqualified indorsement of the whole English Press, as a work brilliant in its composition and never excelled in the absorbing interest which it awakend in the mind of the reader. From among numerous notices we select the following:
All the wind descriptions of the the seemed of war, and the graphic picturing of the soldier's life, that lent such a charm to Leve's "Charles O'Maller" are equalled, and in a great must pulsance surpassed by the "Goerilla Chief, or the Romance of War." There is more of the "whisters" of war, if we may so acroses it, in which the romants during the fierce cruelty, and the reckless bravery of the bands their, are mingled in a thrilling manner with the achievements of the courageous and honorable soldier. It is the mort in tensely interesting episode of war that we have ever read. [Critic. Price 50 cents.
